Project Overview

Tomkinson is a British carpet brand with over a century of heritage, renowned for quality wool and synthetic carpets — including the best-selling Tomkinson Twist.

Following the 2017 merger of Manx Carpets and Mr Tomkinson, the business needed a unified identity under the stronger Tomkinson name. The dual-branded Manx Tomkinson wasn't working — it split recognition, muddied the message, and made it harder to connect with a younger generation of buyers whose age profile the business needed to broaden.

The challenge was significant: honour the heritage that existing stockists and customers valued, while building something modern enough to stand confidently in a competitive premium market.

Industry

Company size

What we did

Identity Design
Brand Guidelines

Social Media
Packaging

Our approach

We helped Tomkinson build a carpet brand identity that moved from a dual-branded past to a single, confident identity — retaining the equity that mattered while creating the clarity the business needed to move forward.

Brand Strategy

Before touching the visual identity, we explored both a phased transition and a clean-break approach. The phased route won — it offered maximum market continuity while steadily building recognition for the unified Tomkinson name. That strategic decision shaped everything that followed.

The new identity

The new identity introduced a simplified brand name and lock-up, featuring an updated mark inspired by Tomkinson's hometown of Kidderminster — a subtle nod to the area's textile heritage and early Axminster patterns. The date of establishment was retained as a quiet confidence signal: we've been doing this for a very long time.

The colour palette was refreshed to balance tradition with modernity — a new set of tones that feel contemporary without abandoning the warmth the brand had built. A flexible brand identity system was developed to work across everything from swatch packs and POS to brochures and digital campaigns.

The Result

A century-old carpet brand with a new chapter — one identity, clearly told, ready for the next generation.

One brand, not two

The post-merger dual identity resolved into a single, confident Tomkinson — clearer for stockists, clearer for customers.

Recognised, but refreshed

The rebrand retained what loyal customers recognise while giving new audiences a reason to take notice.

A system that scales

Guidelines, literature, swatch packs, social — a complete identity toolkit that works consistently across every touchpoint.

Built for the next chapter

A brand with enough flexibility and confidence to carry Tomkinson into new markets without needing another rebrand.

“ The rebrand has given Tomkinson a more confident and cohesive identity, without losing the heritage that makes it special. It strikes the right balance — modern, but unmistakably Tomkinson.”

Rachel Birbeck, Marketing Director — Tomkinson Carpets
